

GERMANY WIDENS THE BATTLE FRONT; LONGWY CAPTURED

French Claim No Need For Anxiety, Although Situation is Confused

PROCEED WITH SPEED

Announce Secret German War Weapons, Including Anti-Tank Defenses

By Pierre J. Huss
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, May 16—(INS)—With the capture of Longwy, just north of the Maginot Line, German troops have widened the battle-front in Belgium and France and claimed the scene for "what may be one of the greatest defeats of modern times," official Nazi spokesmen declared today.

Probably within the next few days, German military circles asserted that Hitler's 1940 adaptation of the famous Vosschiffen Plan for the encirclement of Paris was proceeding with a speed and precision far exceeding that of 1914.

The German army, according to military informants at Berlin, is gradually moving into full battle position, and the next few days undoubtedly will see a large scale engagement "overshadowing Waterloo and the Marne in its extent and importance."

The battle will begin, it is said, along the line from Antwerp along the Dyle River to Namur.

Already, according to German spokesmen, the Nazi drive has caused far greater havoc within the allied range than any one suspects. The climax is expected over the week-end. The northern and southern arms of the German pincer are already pushing.

Says United States Is "Frightfully Unprepared"

(Exclusive) By Frank J. Burke
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, May 16—(INS)—Charging the United States is "frightfully unprepared" against possible attack from foreign powers, the Aid Defense League today called for a "streamlined" general military staff and immediate increase in the nation's mechanized fighting forces.

A dismal picture of inadequate airplane equipment; virtually no anti-aircraft facilities; and petty squabbling and delay by the "brass hats" was painted by Kern Dodge, Philadelphia engineer and president of the league, composed mostly of ex-service men.

"We are practically defenseless now against enemy air attack," Dodge told International News Service in an interview. "We haven't enough anti-aircraft equipment to protect a city of 100,000 let alone any one coastal region. This is true of practically the whole military establishment."

"The public is informed that we have some thousands of airplanes and they assume these are all modern, efficient and of latest type," he asserted. "The fact is that we have less than 50 modern defense ships of the flying arsenal type. The number of first class planes is so small as to be negligible in comparison with air fleets of other powers."

"The League believes the United States should have 4,000 heavy bombers immediately to defend both coasts—and a total of at least 12,000 airplanes of all types in service," said Dodge. "We now have from 4,000 to 5,000 planes, including all services and embracing training craft and obsolete ships. It is estimated Germany has 15,000 to 20,000 planes; Italy 10,000, and France and England combined 12,000 to 16,000."

The League president lashed out at failure of the army and navy to recognize air power as the "basic need for our complete national protection." Dodge asserted that in January, 1939, he urged the House Committee on Military Affairs to create a joint national air defense board which would recommend a legislative policy aimed at increased air protection.

"It is clear that Congress or the public cannot hope to get reliable air defense advice from either the Army or the Navy high command as now constituted," Dodge declared. "We therefore advocate setting up immediately a separate organization composed of air officers who will be free to give such advice and to plan a logical, common-sense air program."

"Intellectually frozen gentlemen of the department of brass hats, right up to the top," he stated bluntly, "are most concerned with spending national defense dollars for political purposes in permanent shore stations for the Navy and elaborate and costly air fields for the Army than acquiring mechanized units of national defense." The League president also criticized the Navy's "animated oyster cans which we call treaty cruisers and destroyers."

Pointing out that the United States can be attacked just as were the "neutral nations" of Europe, Dodge said the League has often warned Congress of Germany's dangerous and growing air force, with the Nazis' current successes in Holland and Belgium, Norway and the like, that warning has been borne out, he concluded.

Judas Tree Presented To School By Seventh Grade

A Judas tree, the gift of the seventh grade, now graces the lawn of Jefferson avenue public school.

The formal presentation and planting of the class gift occurred yesterday afternoon, the seventh graders making the donation to the school during their last year in that building.

Mary Elizabeth Finegan made the presentation speech, the tree being accepted for the school by principal Walter J. Rosser. Shirley Peet read the story of the Judas tree.

The planting was done by four students, Henry Kryven, Marvin Collins, John Cianfaro and John Minni, who were also named as members of the committee to water and otherwise care for the tree.

This is the first seventh grade at Jefferson avenue building to present a permanent memorial to the school.

MORRISVILLE COUNCIL TO ENFORCE NOTICES

Will Make Sidewalk Repairs And Charge 10% Penalty

TO EXTEND WATER MAIN

MORRISVILLE, May 16—Borough Council has decided not to foot with property owners who have thus far failed to comply with notices to repair sidewalks.

Several pavements ordered repaired on North Pennsylvania avenue and also on Harrison avenue have not been done by residents. Common Council decided to do the work itself with an additional cost of 10 per cent, which will be a lien against the property.

While some residents have had the improvements made, others have neglected it and notices sent seemed to be of little use. The work will start in a few days.

Consulting engineers making plans for the filtration plant improvement presented a report to Council. Pending further action Council authorized the water committee and Borough Engineer Harry H. Lee, Jr., to confer with the State Department of Health and also to visit a similar filtration plant at Pottstown, Pa.

The board authorized the WPA water main project extension, one of 1,500 feet of six-inch water main on Elm avenue, in Lower Makefield township, to supply property on the Howard J. Erb tract. Macadam paving is being begun on West Hendrickson avenue, between Stockham and North Lafayette. Serving of paving notices for curb, gutter and sidewalks in the near future was authorized.

Council voted a donation of $100 to the Community Nursing Fund Drive, now being conducted by the Legion. The Legion Drum and Bugle Corps were given permission to use Williamson Park for a carnival the last two weeks in June.

Ice cream and cake were served to over 50 guests, at tables adorned with lilacs. A large wedding cake with a tiny bride and groom graced the main table where the couple and their parents sat.

Raymond Dewees was master of ceremonies, and called upon officers of various organizations who, in turn, offered felicitations to the popular couple.

Philadelphia, May 16—While his wife pursued him in an automobile, Harry Fletcher, 46-year-old electrical worker, plunged 85 feet to death today from a bridge span at the Reading Railroad in North Philadelphia.

By the time his wife, Olive, reached the scene, she told police she had followed her husband for fear of his carrying out threats of a suicide death.

Strike at Defense Measures

Washington, May 16—U. S. military appropriations, striking at defense tactics under projected new Army and Navy increased measures, was considered today by Senate isolation leaders, including Senators Clark, Missouri, Democrat, and Downey, California, Democrat.

Under preliminary plans, propaganda of the arms limitation, the order provides:

That none of the monetary increase sought by the President for increased defense might be used in any move of aggression.

That none of the money might be used in defense operations beyond a 500-mile limit, set in the ocean circling the Western Hemisphere—unless such operations were directed against an enemy that had attempted trespassing the United States or any of its possessions.

Deny "Winking" at Speed

Harrisburg, May 16—That State Motor Police were "winking" at violations of the 50-mile-an-hour speed limit, was forcefully denied today by Deputy Commissioner C. M. Wilhelm.

"The 50-mile limit is being enforced as it has always been," he declared. "There has been no change in policy."

Revenue Department officials joined Colonel Wilhelm's denial and pointed to a comparative reduction in fatalities and accidents since the introduction of the speed limit in 1938.

Market Opens High

New York, May 16—The stock market opened high today in comparatively quiet dealings.

The ticker fell behind for a brief minute in the opening. After the opening orders had been exercised, the list quieted down to await further developments in the European war situation.

Warned of Italy's Possible War Move

Washington, May 16—The United States Government has been warned by its officials abroad to expect the entry of Italy into the European war, today.

This was learned as it also came to light the President early yesterday addressed an eleventh hour plea for peace to Premier Mussolini.

While the advice that Italy had chosen "der tag" came from very responsible European informants, officials pointed out that in a totalitarian state like Italy the issue of war or peace is rested in the mind of one man.

Hence, it was realized that a last-minute plea might make some changes in Mussolini's reported war plans.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

Candidates And The Court

Washington, May 15. IT does seem that this game of public boomer, boosting and ballyhooing members of the United States Supreme Court in connection with Presidential nominations ought to be abandoned. By this time, it should be clear that it is a degrading business, exceedingly offensive to the court as a whole and disgusting to discriminating people.

YET, every few months there is an outbreak of publicity along this line for which there is the flimsiest of foundation. Its only result is to impair the dignity of the court, cheapen it in the eyes of the public. It is not surprising that some of the justices deeply resent these recurrent efforts to tinge the bench with politics and fret at their inability to do anything about it.

VERY recently the name of Mr. Justice Roberts has been widely linked with the Republican nomination. Two New Deal columnists and a Broadway gossip radio commentator proclaimed him a "dark horse" and spoke of the "movement" to nominate him. Other writers and commentators took it up and to such an extent that undoubtedly a good many unthinking people now have the idea that a justice of the Supreme Court is actually running after the nomination.

OF course, this is a terrible injustice to Mr. Roberts, who thinks it a greater honor to be on the Supreme Court than to be President.

Sellersville-Perkasie Girls Capture Honors

SELLERSVILLE, May 16—Seventeen Sellersville-Perkasie High school girls won their school its second straight national championship for school safety patrols in Washington, D. C., Saturday.

About 16,000 children from schools throughout the nation competed. Pennsylvania school boy patrols and girls' drill teams brought home the bacon in the annual competition which makes a colorful procession down Constitution avenue in the Capitol.

Margaret Smith and Mary Schurr, of the Sell-Perk High faculty, accompanied the team of 17 girls and two alternates to Washington for the day. They returned to Sellersville and Perkasie late that night.

Sell-Perk's snappy team looked natty in the new blue and steel uniforms and the members were put through their paces with much eclat by Miss Glenna Nase, the captain. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Zink, Sellersville. Last year almost the same team went to Washington and won the huge silver cup for the first time. To keep it permanently Sell-Perk High must win again next year. The cup is presented by a well known automobile club in an effort to cut down the number of automobile accidents at street crossings.

HYSTERIA NOT REQUIRED

As the war spreads over an increasingly large portion of Europe, it is necessary that Americans avoid hysteria and keep their heads. There has been a tendency, which has almost developed into a national habit, of viewing each development in the conflict with exaggerated alarm.

These emotional outbursts give rise to insipid expressions of opinion based neither on fact nor on good military theory. They result in a propensity on the part of many persons to tell each other: "We shall be at war soon; every nation will be in it before it is over." Such expressions are purely prophetic; too often they seem to be excursions from sanity.

If the United States decides to enter this war, it should do so only after sound consideration of the facts; it should weigh its policy and determine its action in the light of rational thinking, not emotional. It has been said that the United States is the only country that can remain neutral with impunity; its strength insures that position. This is a point worth remembering.

The matter of preparedness and the question of what course the United States should pursue, not only to preserve its own independence but to perpetuate its important role in world affairs, must be given calm consideration. Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, chairman of an army funds appropriation committee, contends that Germany's invasion of Holland and Belgium "should make us take the same steps to perfect our military machine as if we had already declared war."

Senator Thomas said this nation should proceed as soon as possible to establish a fully-equipped army of 400,000 men. At present, he declared, only 75,000 are so equipped. He apparently believes that we should take a lesson from the fact that Germany is making a drive to end the war before her enemies are fully equipped.

Senator Nye sees the invasion as setting the battleground for the beginning of "the real war," points out it is pretty much the old battleground of the ages and says it emphasizes again "how lucky we are."

It must be expected that this new phase of the war will have its inevitable reaction here. It is essential that Americans think seriously about this nation's place in the world and its future in the light of new events. But emotional jags, which find expression in parrot-like repetition of clichés concerning this country's entrance into the conflict, merely hamper serious thought.

Announcement by the Missouri Pacific Railroad that it carried only 67,007 hoboes in 1939 as against 73,630 the year before doesn't mean anything. No railroad knows how many hoboes it carries. The hoboes themselves make sure of that.

In the 150 years of its existence the U. S. Patent Office has granted more than 2,000,000 patents, but it still takes a grown man and a good-sized boy to open a window in a passenger coach.

A Boston man has discovered a way to kill germs on bowling balls, but to one who doesn't know anything about it, it seems a better way to get even with a germ on a bowling ball would be to let it stay there and suffer.

"TITAN TOWER" by JAMES G. CHESNUTT

Story to Date

Thrown together when called to aid mechanic snared in elevator machinery atop Titan Tower, a new skyscraper, Nurse Linda Morton and Dr. Bill Blaine work on the victim with Dr. Leonard Renquist. Linda is more thrilled over the handsome Dr. Blaine than she can reveal at the exciting moment. Finally the operation is completed.

CHAPTER TWO

It seemed that nearly a hundred persons swarmed all over the sun- deck, the bright-awninged solarium which was the newest attraction of Titan Tower.

"Beautiful work, Blaine," she heard one say. "I never saw anything like it."

So that was his name, Bill Blaine. Dr. Blaine. It was a nice name. Linda resolved she liked it.

"Don't give me the credit, Sam," she heard Blaine say, and she saw his even white teeth in a grin as he said it. "Rennie here gave me the cues. How could I miss?"

The slowly one looked as though he wanted no part of the praise. He just looked tired.

Bill Blaine's hand was steady as a bird dog's point as he lighted a cigaret. The gloves were no longer on his hands.

He looked along the end of his cigaret and the flame of the match and saw Linda's face framed in the smoke.

"... and," Blaine resumed, "we would both have been lost without the help of this young lady," he shouldered his way to Linda's side, "who looks as though she might be ready for a rest herself."

"Me—oh!" the color came swiftly back to Linda's face. It was a nice oval face, Bill Blaine noticed, in which the best features were wide- spaced violet eyes with long dark lashes, and a soft, full mouth.

The mouth was even nicer, Blaine decided, when she smiled like that, a sort of retiring "please excuse me" expression. A stray wisp of her wavy blonde hair clung, moist, to her smooth brow.

"You know," Blaine continued, addressing no one in particular, "I've been trying out this new solarium ever since it started and the first nice thing that happened to me was when I found a job right in our own top yard, as the saying goes."

If Bill Blaine had intended to clarify what he meant he didn't get to it, for his attention was distracted by a man who came up to their group. The man, for his outward appearance, was nothing to distract attention in any group.

He was a gray man, dressed in a nondescript gray suit, which might have made him look like a banker if it were pressed. A gray fedora perched from the back of his head at the angle acquired by a cracker barrel sage. His hair was gray. His eyes were gray and friendly.

His personality, so far as Linda could see, was as neutral a gray as his garb.

Linda vaguely recalled having seen him about the building. When she heard what Bill Blaine had to say to the gray man, in an aside, she decided Mr. Gray was a news- paperman.

"Listen," Bill urged, with consid- erable feeling, "you'll have to keep this out of the papers. You can do it."

"Why, my boy?" the gray man smiled, and somehow it made him look less gray. "Accidents happen in the best of buildings, you know. Besides, it wasn't an elevator acci- dent, really. No passengers were endangered..." He paused.

"What's the matter, lad?" he con- tinued, "are you afraid you'll wake play, Linda agreed, but the odds were that he wouldn't know her from the elevator starter or the corner- stone the next time they met...

Suddenly Linda was yanked from the immediate past and the forecast future into the present as she barged full tilt into a door that re- fused to swing, even against more force than she could muster.

She glared at the door as though to stare it down, and read letters, which spelled: "Stairway."

The glare turned into a grin—a wan, tired effort, but well-inten-

"I'm afraid that I'll wake tomorrow," said Blaine looking directly at Linda.

up tomorrow and find yourself fa- mous? The doctor hates to see— in the papers, huh?"

"I'm afraid," and Bill looked di- rectly at Linda, "that I'll wake to- morrow..."

For the briefest moment, Linda wondered what he meant.

And then she knew. He meant Linda.

Linda needed a bit of waking up herself, as she walked in a daze from the roof down the single flight of stairs to the twenty-fifth floor. Dr. Blaine's last words echoed in her ears.

"I'm afraid that I'll wake to- morrow," he had said, a smile on his mouth. And his look, as he said it, was at her—and for her. His eyes, she remembered, didn't absorb any of the smile.

Afraid he'd wake up and find she was just a dream, was he? That's what his words had implied—and his eyes had finished the sentence. It was all very romantic and just what she would have had him say if she'd written the dialogue for a tioned—as realization dawned that she had tried to open the door the wrong way.

"Toward you, Linda girl, not away," she remonstrated, borrow- ing a phrase she had heard in the feverish course of events a few feet above and a few minutes ago; in the nightmare which ended in a dream—of the nice kind.

Nice building, good old pal! Linda thought. You raise it from a pup, practically, and then it plays tricks on you by switching door hinges, re- sulting in skinned knuckles that look like an incipient case of house- wife's hands.

Surveying the injured member, which was very white and very small and finely shaped, Linda walked through the door and turned down the corridor to Dr. Thorpe's office, where she sat down at her desk in the reception room and continued to gaze blankly at her hand.

Her mind, however, was on her heart.

OPENING G. O. P. CONVENTION CEREMONIES WILL BE HELD IN FAMED INDEPENDENCE HALL

By International News Service

PHILADELPHIA, May 16—(INS)—Independence Hall, where the American Colonies proclaimed their separation from England in 1776, will be the scene of opening ceremonies of the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia, June 24th.

Delegates will meet on the plaza outside the red-brick, Colonial structure to "rededicate their party to the principles of Americanism," according to plans announced by Charles Warner, chairman of the subcommittee in charge of arrangements.

Still much the same as it was in the days of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and other hallowed figures of early America's history, the Hall annually is a mecca for thousands of tourists who either make Philadelphia and its historic shrines an objective of their travels or stop here enroute to other points for a tour of this "Birthplace of American Liberty."

With its shining white wood trimmings, its ancient clock tower and white-trimmed windows, Independence Hall remains a model of authentic Colonial architecture. Inside are the spiral and spiral staircases, where the famous document was signed, and other rooms used by various early Colonial assemblies, courts and officials. Desks and chairs, ink wells and pens used by the Declaration signers are among exhibits.

Prime attraction in the Hall, of course, is the Liberty Bell, cracked, according to one legend, when a joyful bell-ringer told it to announce the signing of the Declaration, but actually broken while tolling the funeral of Chief Justice Marshall in 1835.

The bell is mounted on a wooden base in the entrance to the lobby.

Ceremonies at the shrine, however, will be but one of several events now scheduled by the arrangements committee. Among the others is a repetition of the celebrated Philadelphia Mummers' or New Year's Day parade which rivals in picturesque splendor the Mardi Gras of New Orleans.

The parade was held in 1936 for benefit of the Democratic National Convention and drew 500,000 spectators along its line of march. This year it will be held Tuesday evening, June 25th.

A third event will be a regatta with races and fireworks on the Schuylkill River in Fairmount Park, Wednesday night, June 26th.

THERMOMETERS ARE GUIDE TO THE GOOD FOOD PREPARATION

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)

Controlled temperature by the use of thermometers is now taking the "guess work" out of food preparation.

Good cooks are coming to realize more and more that oven temperature will make the difference between the soufflé that is perfect and one that falls like a pricked balloon. Correct temperature is equally important for frying tender doughnuts and for roasting meat to just the right turn.

SUNDAY DINNER

Suggestions

In a rapidly changing world, one American custom remains static—a Sunday dinner planned with care and forethought because that day is usually the only one when the entire family is together for a leisurely meal. With so many fresh foods available on the market today, planning a satisfying, colorful and good menu for those Sunday dinners should present no problem for the homemaker.

When marketing for your Sunday dinner this week, you might notice that especially good vegetable buys are asparagus, beans, beets, cabbage, carrots, peas and spinach. Strawberries, pineapple, grapefruit and oranges are economy finds in the fruit departments.

Fresh cuts of pork are slightly lower this week. Good meat buys are steaks, smoked tongues, chunks of lamb and sliced bacon. Poultry prices are fair, and ducklings are an excellent value. If your family likes shad, now is the time to purchase this, for the season is at its peak. Codfish steaks, butterfish, flounder, porgies, fresh mackerel, clams and halibut are all excellent fish buys.

Here are three menus, tested by Cora Anthony of the A&P kitchen, for Sunday dinner menus:

Low Cost Dinner

Pot roast with buttered noodles
Buttered fresh spinach
Stuffed prune salad
Bread and butter
Chocolate Pudding
Coffee Tea Milk

Moderate Cost Dinner

Roast Leg of Pork
Browned new potatoes
Fresh buttered peas
Cole Slaw
Rolls and Butter
Fresh Rhubarb Pie
Coffee Tea Milk

Very Special Dinner

Fresh Cantaloupe
Individual T-bone Steak
Latticed Potatoes
Buttered Fresh Asparagus
Tomato Salad
Rolls and Butter
Fresh Pineapple Sundae
Tea Coffee Milk

Modern cookbooks suggest cooking by exact temperature in almost every recipe. For oven cooking, the temperature scale is divided into several sections, each of which is suitable for certain foods.

Egg dishes and other foods that have delicate proteins are baked at the lower end of the scale. For example, a very slow oven, 225 to 250 degrees F., is used for baking fruit whips. A slow oven, 250 to 300 degrees F., is used for sponge cake and custards.

A moderate oven, 325 to 375 degrees F., is used for baking most cakes, and a moderately hot oven, 375 to 400 degrees F., is right for most cookies. A hot oven, 400 to 450 degrees F., is needed for rolls and muffins.

Naturally the lower temperatures are needed when the food is to cook slowly and to brown gradually, and the higher temperature when it is to have a crisp crust. Food that is heavy with sugar or dried fruit also needs a lower temperature so that the sugar will not scorch.

The oven thermometer and regulator are useful guides in baking most any food exactly right. They assure the homemaker that the oven is the right temperature to give a pan of rolls a crisp crust without burning the edges.

Another device that helps to turn out perfectly cooked meats is the roast-meat thermometer. Inserted into the center of a ham, prime rib cut of beef, or a leg of lamb, and left there while the roast is in the oven, it will tell when the inside of the roast is cooked to the desired turn. Because the thermometer tells the temperature in the center of the roast, it shows when the meat is exactly right for serving.

When it comes to deep-fat frying, controlled temperature is especially important. With the thermometer right in the fat and showing exactly how hot it is, you can make French-fried potatoes the same golden brown every time.

Other helpful devices are thermometers for candy making, for the refrigerator, and for storage rooms where it is important to keep proper temperatures to prevent the spoilage of foods.

Directed by W. S. Van Dyke II, the play deals with a social butterfly who, after a wrecked romance, finds her real love and happiness at the side of an earnest scientist working for the public good in a tenement clinic. Action ranges from fashionable night clubs and fashion salons to the tenements.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"Forgotten Girls," the new offering at the Bristol Theatre, is a sympathetic and heart-warming tale of the problems of a young girl drawn into a network of crime through the circumstances of her environment.

Convicted, by an overwhelming array of circumstantial evidence, of a crime of which she is innocent, Judy Wingate, portrayed tellingly by Louise Platt, goes to a model women's prison. She is pathetically happy in this institution, where for the first time in her life she has a cheerful room of her own and an opportunity to study and learn.

RITZ THEATRE

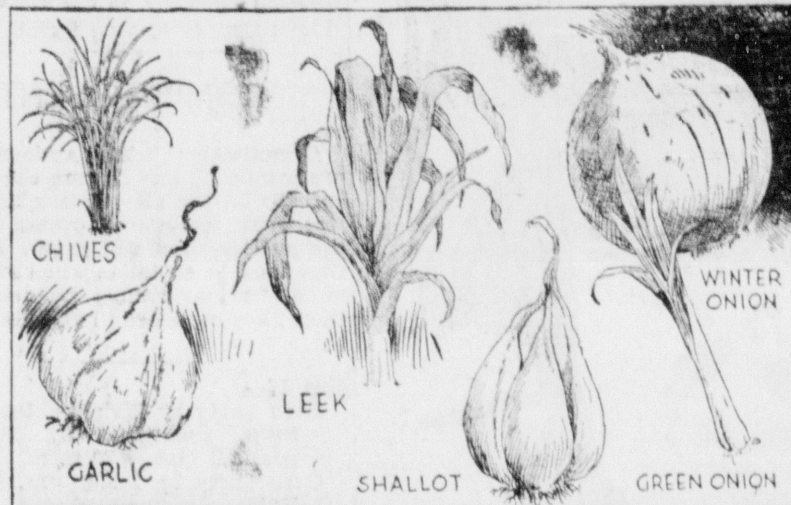

Priscilla Lane is looking very quaint these days with her new hair-do inspired by her role in "The Roaring Twenties."

In the picture Priscilla wears the clothes of the period—1918 to 1940. Her latest coiffure is from the year 1928 when all the girls went in for long hair and back knots and Priscilla's hair is long enough to wear this way.

More Subtle Onion Flavor Given by Leeks and Chives

To introduce the onion flavor into salads and cooked dishes in a more subtle way than by the outright use of onions, the amateur gardener may grow chives and leeks.

Chives are perennial, and besides producing tubular leaves which add just the right accent to bowl salad and cottage cheese, they bear lovely mauve blossoms. You can start them from seeds, or by dividing the roots of established plants, and they will make a most attractive border for a garden path, living many years.

Leeks are always cooked, and many esteem them superior to onions in a stew. They are grown from seed, and should be transplanted for best results. The English gardeners pride themselves on exhibiting leeks which may be grown in this manner: When the plants are about as thick as a lead pencil lift them, and set each one in a hole made with a dibber. Do not fill the hole, but merely cover the roots at the bottom with earth and let the hole fill naturally with washed earth. In rich soil the leeks will grow to a diameter of an inch or more.

If you want to accumulate a stock of garlic, assuming your consumption of this article is larger than the average, you can do it by planting the small garlic cloves. Shallots, another form of the onion used chiefly for cooking and having a mild flavor, are grown from sets which may be planted in the fall where the winters are mild, and in the spring in colder states.

Both green and mature onions may be grown from sets or seeds. Sets produce the earliest green onions, and for this purpose they should be planted two to three inches deep, for mature onions not so deep.

All onions are hardy, and Egyptian or perennial onions are true perennials, living many years in cold weather states. They are grown from sets planted in the fall and produce green onions as soon as the ground thaws out in the spring.

BENSALEM OWLS WHIP ALUMNI NINE, 12 TO 3

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 16—The Bensalem Owls spotted their Alumni a three-run lead, then proceeded to wrestle the edge from their opponents with late inning rallies which ultimately gave the home forces an easy triumph over the old students in a twilight tilt played on the school diamond last night. The final score was 12 to 3.

GAME TONIGHT

Tonight on Leedom's field, the Johnson Colored All-Stars will play the Voltz-Texaco team of the Bristol Suburban League. Game is scheduled to begin at 6:30 o'clock sharp. It is most likely that Cooper will do the hurling for the Voltz team with Boccardo behind the plate. For the colored boys, Bragg will do the pitching and Spencer the catching.

TEAM FAILS TO APPEAR

Followers of the Bristol A. A. team received another disappointment last night when the East Falls Italians failed to put in an appearance to play their scheduled game on Leedom's field. Last Wednesday night, the Burlington Spartans did not show up. Last Sunday, the A. A. went to East Falls and last night the East Falls team was supposed to have come here for a return game.

GAINS FAMILY MEMENTO

SAN FRANCISCO—(INS)—Through a strange coincidence, Ray Schiller has gained a treasured family memento. While idling through a museum at Stockton, Cal., Schiller came upon a battered battleflag on the wall. It was the flag of the Union warship "Cumberland" which was sunk during the Civil War. Schiller's grandfather, "Yankee" Sullivan, was a member of the crew when the craft sank, and swam two miles to shore. The museum curator gave Schiller a fragment of the flag.

DORIS ELY'S HOMER GIVES BENSALEM A WIN

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 16—Doris Ely, Bensalem's sensational sophomore athlete, whom many local fans will recall for her brilliant performance on the basketball court in single-handedly beating Bristol High's team, arose to new heights in the realm of sport achievement at Bensalem when she led her team to an upset victory over the Southampton Canines on the local field here yesterday afternoon in an extra inning battle. The final score was 9-8.

With her team trailing, 3-2, in the 4th, she stepped to the plate with one out, two runs in and the bases full. All she did was to unload the sacks with a terrific wallop that sailed over Helen Markovich's head in centerfield, for a round tripper that put the Owl girls ahead, 6-3.
